An Intergroup is a vital A.A. service office that represents partnership among groups in a community - just as A.A. groups themselves are a partnership of individuals. These offices are established to carry out common functions that are best handled by a centralized office, and it is usually maintained, supervised, and supported by these groups for their common interest. The office exists to aid the groups in carrying the A.A. message to the alcoholic who still suffers. Methods and goals vary from one area to another, but generally the intergroup or central office responsibility is to:

1. Respond to phone requests for help from alcoholics and, when appropriate, arrange for A.A. volunteers (listed with the office) to meet with and accompany them to an A.A. meeting.
2. Maintain A.A listings in local phone directories, handle phone and mail inquiries, and route them to local groups, thus distributing Twelfth-Step work on a geographical basis so that newcomers are assured of help.
3. Distribute up-to-date meeting list
4. Stock and sell A.A. literature
5. Serve as a communications center for participating groups - often issuing regular newsletters of bulletins to keep groups informed about one another.
6. Arrange systems for groups to exchange speakers.
7. Coordinate the efforts of intergroup committees.
8. Sometimes provide information on treatment facilities, hospitals, and halfway houses.
9. Through P.I. and C.P.C. committees, handle requests for information about A.A. from local news media, arrange local radio or TV programs about A.A. and furnish speakers for schools and non-A.A. organizations.
10. Cooperate with local, district and committees. (Some intergroups elect members to serve as area liaisons and welcome their participation in intergroup meetings.)
11. Maintain communication and cooperation - but not affiliation - with the community and helping - professionals in the field of alcoholism.
